

Candice W. Jones, MD, FAAP is a board-certified physician practicing as a general pediatrician in Orlando, FL. She provides a standard of care that enriches the lives of thousands of kids and parents each year. Dr. Candice, a former National Health Service Corps (NHSC) Scholar, is committed to the health and well-being of underserved children and adolescents in areas affected the greatest by health inequalities.

Dr. Candice completed residency in Pediatrics at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore, MD. She earned her Medical Doctorate at the Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta, GA. She is a Spokesperson for the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP), member of its' Council on Communications and Media (COCM) and Florida Chapter (FCAAP).

Dr. Candice steps out of the exam room to support various charitable organizations, children health initiatives and to promote wellness in the community. For her efforts, she was awarded in 2018 the Health Empowerment Award by the Central Florida Urban League, the Public Health Hero Award by the Department of Health Orange County, and in 2020 the Orange County Distinguished Citizen of the Year Award.

Dr. Candice has special interest in medical media because of its' educational reach. In 2016, she launched DrCandiceMD.com, a website focused on kid health education. She also created a podcast, KIDing Around with Dr. Candice where she discusses pediatric and parenting topics with other experts. She has been featured on numerous local and national news, radio and digital outlets, as well as on various health panels and as a guest speaker.

Dr. Candice is available to share her kid health expertise On Air or at your next event.
